

There is absolutely no reason for anyone to disturb me while I am relaxing or eating at home to advise me of something on the television or radio. If it is important enough to have persons watch it, it will be advertised by the stations themselves either as a legitimate commercial or as a P.S.A. . I do not need a phone call interrupting me while I am at home. I feel these interruptions are a violation of my right to privacy and the quiet and peaceful enjoyment of my home.

All unsolicited phone and e-mail communications should be prohibited from violating my right to privacy.

Sincerely!
Ross Turner
